Why Take the SAT or ACT if Colleges are Test-Optional?

Even with many colleges moving to test-optional policies, submitting an SAT or ACT score can give students a competitive edge. Here's how these exams can benefit your college journey:

- Qualify for merit-based scholarships that often require test scores.
- Strengthen your application if your GPA isn't as high as you'd like.
- Stand out in the admissions process at competitive colleges.
- Keep options open at schools that still require test scores.
- Show readiness for college-level work to admissions officers and future employers.
- Earn placement in advanced or honors courses.
- Meet state or district graduation/testing requirements (in some areas).
